Analítica

The work, in its entirety, was conducted by interviewing a young who calls himself a gay and a black student from Rio de Janeiro, a low-income social class student from a regular high school public school located on the outskirts of a municipality located in the interior of Bahia. In the following text, we emphasize social markers of gender / sexuality and race / ethnicity. These markers presented as discomfort for the subject interviewed, since they do not meet the characterizations and practices determined by heteronormativity. Thus, we find that there is a hierarchical and vertical view that involves other identities as well as possibilities of affective and sexual experiences different from those determined by social norms. Keywords: gender; ethnics markers; sexual diversity; student
