Analítica

An old orphanage in the city of Engenheiro Paulo de Frontin, in the coffee valley of the state of Rio de Janeiro, created in Brazil during the Getulio Vargas dictatorship, is unearthed to think about the present of psychological practices in education. From the perspective of Foucaultian studies, we ground a historical ontology between disciplinary spaces of the past and safety nets of the now. From this intersection of two-time childhood governments, I conceptualize pre-crime - from Phillip Kindred Dick's science fiction - in education and becoming orphan. Two case studies of autism and infraction point to a tutelary "psycholage" of bodies that enables us to glimpse a critical psychology of the present. In terms of a Hermeneutics of the subject (Foucault, 2014a), this work undertakes a psychology of self-care as a practice of freedom, whose gaze is a reflection on memory at the same time as an attitude towards becoming
