Analítica

During the last Argentine military dictatorship (1976-1983), the ways in which women detainees were treated in clandestine detention centers covered varied forms of aggression, including repertoires of gender and sexual violence as a form of intensification of oppression. The present work intends, in the first place, to give an account of the different forms of gender violence to which women were subjected in the clandestine detention centers during the last dictatorship in Argentina, from a gender perspective. Second, reflect on the meanings of it. And, finally, to account for the different forms of resistance that, despite the context in which nothing seemed possible, carried out the kidnapped. The corpus of the work will be made up of interviews carried out together with Fernando Alvarez and Lizel Tornay for the film "Campo de batalla. Cuerpo de Mujer" (Fernando Alvarez, 2013), testimonies provided by survivors and legal testimonies
