Analítica

In 2006 government agencies' were introduced in Spain as a new typology of public entity, with the purpose of modernizing the Spanish Public Administration and direct it towards a managerial model based on flexibility and efficiency in the public services management. The managerial model, accomplished in Anglo-Saxon legal systems, did not succeed in Spain as expected and ended up being suppressed in 2015. Nevertheless, the Parliament has decided to recover the agencies in 2021, bringing out the debate on this issue again. The aim of this study is to analyze the failure of the government agencies as a new public entity and as a new public services management culture
