Analítica

The publication of Pope Francis' encyclical Laudato si' has arisen several reactions from different ambits. The present article, underlining its relationship with the teachings of earlier pontiffs and with the so-called Document of Aparecida, emphasizes six fundamental ideas of the encyclical: the need of a correct comprehension of the concept of dominion, the importance of a human ecology, the persistence in society of the evil of relativism, the insistence of Pope Francis on the notion of creation, the concern for the natural world as a moral obligation and, finally, the integral ecology option. We end with a brief indication of the paths that Francis proposes to abandon the current situation
