Analítica

The Peruvian Constitution of 1993 regulates a semi-presidential system that defines the form of government in the country, in which a direct relationship is established between the executive power, represented by the National Government, with the legislative power, that is, the Congress of the Republic; a system on which a balance of powers is developed, guaranteeing the governability to make possible the democratic development of the country. However, as a result of the dissolution of the Congress of the Republic and the development of a pandemic caused by Covid-19, the National Government does not have representatives in the Congress of the Republic, which shows a delicate situation that may affect governance and the development of democracy. In this matter, although it is true that there is a proper correlation of functions and powers, the delicate moment that the country is going through, in historical terms, demands evaluating the importance and validity of the political parties, which are essentially responsible for the political crisis in the country in the last thirty years
