Analítica

This paper analyzes the imaginary and visions of the future in prospective key, during the Argentinas military dictatorships (1966-1983). We are interested in explaining how the political and futuristic vision of the "modern" was linked to the idea of "building" a city as synonym of future and development. The National Security Doctrine as context, the contributions of cybernetics, prospective and futurology studies were important for urban development planning and projects around Buenos Aires in the year 2000
