Analítica

This paper analyzes both normative and jurisprudential bases that all administrative authority elections and specifically the Electoral Institute of Mexico State must take into account for adequate individualization of sanctions. The work is mainly divided into two transverse themes, namely: general principles of the penalizing and stages in the process of individualization of sanctions. Regarding the first issue explains why it was considered appropriate to apply the principles of administrative law penalizing authority and which of these penalties have been applied with greater relevance. As regards the second issue for consideration, it is divided into three stages: the legislative individualization, administrative or judicial individualization and executive individualization. In the first, which corresponds to the legislature, it arise the catalogs of violations and sanctions given by the same, in the second phase, which corresponds to the administrative authority detailing what the subjective and objective elements, as well as the elements to establish the seriousness of the offense, the degree of responsibility and aggravating to impose a penalty for the particular case are. Finally executive individualization is detailed
