Analítica

This paper examines the new Brazilian model of "public services" provided through public relational contracts. It also analyzes the issue of lack of correspondence between a legal regime of the 20th century and the demands of the 21st century. The research hypothesis suggests the need to recognize the mutability of "public service" concessions. By means of a deductive method and a bibliographic research technique, the research work seeks to demonstrate how the acknowledgement of the relational and procedural nature of the concession can be a planning tool for the realization of fundamental rights, the stabilization of legal relations and a greater democratic legitimacy
