Analítica

Through the subject of Education for Citizenship, key competences should reflect the general common culture and abilities of the individual citizen. This should be consolidated in compulsory education through the subject of education for citizenship. The origin and development of the key competences proposal by the European Union and its establishment in the basic education curriculum are described using the European reference framework. Yet more characteristically the article makes a critical analysis of the lack of integration in the curriculum. In addition it shows ways to integrate it the subject into the curriculum. This demands methodological changes in classroom activities and changes in the role of teachers
