Analítica

This article aims at characterizing two migrant families, representative of two different migratory waves converging in Chivilcoy, based on their respective genealogical analysis, and according to their places of origin, the context and networks that were configured to address the coexistence of situations in which the link with fellow nationals tended to be reinforced and others in which the different groups of migrants and the Creole population prevailed. The overlapping of recent migrant groups, and the oldest ones with the Creole population allows us to observe modes of integration in some cases, but not in all of them; as well as assimilation and differentiation phenomena depending on the circumstances. To achieve our goal, we will start by studying the trajectories of both Basque-French immigrant Francisco Duarte and Lagonegrin Pasqual Grisolia which allow us to observe actual social interactions and relations by combining the course of their lives with structural social processes and the changes derived from the generational transfers. Thus, traditional topics of migratory studies such as inbreeding and civil participation are enriched by their integration to the familiar and collective times
