Analítica

Football as the symbolic arena of society allows us to observe emotional dimensions of human passions that are not usually ex-pressed in other areas of everyday life. Hence the value of track-ing down those events that seem plainly everyday but that reveal the social and political perspectives of a community, for this case, the collectivity available to Colombian society and its vicissitudes. In the present text, I start from the successful performance of the Colombian national team in the Football World Cup Brazil 2014, sporting event in which I observed strong expressions of Colombian nationalism, as rarely it happens in a country lacking consolidated national references. I pretend to reveal through eth-nographic notes and a sporting spectacle such as the FIFA World Cup, the national feeling that in an exacerbated way awoke the Colombian national football team among its national community. Emotions and sports passions that from the sense of belonging to a social group and in a kind of spell between politics, market and mass media managed to snatch the breath of many fellow citizens and combine them under a single shirt
