Analítica

The periodic publication Aragón en la Edad Media, published by the Department of Medieval History, Historiographic Sciences and Techniques, and Arab and Islamic Studies of the University of Zaragoza, Spain is celebrating forty years of arduous existence. The follow-up of a prior editorial project launched in 1945 (EEMCA), Aragón en la Edad Media has been the main channel of expression for researchers and for the publication of diverse academic works carried out in the context of undergraduate and postgraduate dissertations and PhD theses about the medieval Crown of Aragon, within the Department of Medieval History of the University of Zaragoza. This article presents the material upon which my Master thesis is based, which consists of a bibliometric analysis of the aforementioned journal. In general, the basis for this study is the tables of contents of Aragón en la Edad Media and of its parent publication as well as an index of the authors that have collaborated in the journal over the course of these four decades
