Analítica

This paper analyzes the plausibility of the contractual interpretation of the origin of the "civitas" in Marsiglio of Padua's Defensor Pacis. Marsiglio develops a theory of consent in which the right institution of political order demands public laws ruling established by the common consent of all citizens. Even though the notions of consent, consensus or will play an essential role in Marsiglio's theory, I hold that this does not imply that there is a social contract mechanism in his argumentation
