Analítica

This paper deals with the link between the Augustinian thinking and ancient philosophy to show two times in its relationship: first, the integration of Platonic-Neoplatonic speculation as an essential philosophical structure while thinking and, second, its particular reconfiguration from the intellectual Christian matrix. It will be also stand out how this new worldview is always present in Augustine, even when it can be observed that the rising degree of faith inhesion in the life of Bishop of Hippo lets us recognize a renewed development of Christian philosophy
