Análítica

Geopolitics has been one of the integrating disciplines of different dimensions of geographic science that has been more useful for Politics when taking state related decisions regarding foreign and internal politics. In due context, it's development, as much as it's European -German and British- branches, and as much as North American and Asian, had a constant and systematic development until 1945, when United States and Great Britain, without scientific foundations or empiric evidence, officially stigmatized as "Nazi science" during the II World War. This ideological piece of nonsense -mainly instrumental- provoked that, from there on, Geopolitics was left aside from the scientific study. In the United States, it was sub placed by force in a geographic branch of Political Geography, leaving it empty, without its contents and original basis, path imitated in many other parts of the world.. However, at the beginning of the Cold War, and the development of globalization integration process, scientific elites coming from different social, political and economical disciplines realized that the arising phenomenon could not be explained at the margin of geopolitics. However, without daring to contradict the official judgment of the victorious of the II World War, they chose to create a arising geopolitics called "Critical", which arises as a conflicting analysis of the fundamental principles of traditional geopolitics leaving clear that their demands are completely opposite to the others. This article is for leaving evidence of how substantive or feign are the differences and coincidences among the demands of both geopolitics
