Analítica

The certificate of temporary work for incapacity is the official Social Security (EsSalud) and is issued by the mandatory health professional accredited and authorized using criteria for issuing the severity of the illness or injury, normal work, type of treatment or processing and complementary factors. We identified three aspects of the attitudes of physicians against certification: conflict, responsibility and barriers. It also found errors in the certificate of temporary work for incapacity related administrative problems, inadequate product by filling in the absence of training health professionals
