Analítica

The purpose of this paper is to reflect on urban renewal projects in central areas of Latin American cities within the framework of neoliberal urbanplanning. It describes government-initiated urban renewal operations, through which deteriorated spaces are transformed into new centralities. The analysis is based on the contrast of the renovation of the Puerto Madero area in Buenos Aires and the current Tercer Milenio park in Bogotá. With a qualitative analysis perspective, the reflection on the transformation and change processes is articulated in an empirical analysis of ethnographic data and the collection of secondary sources, with special emphasis on the rhetoric of insecurity as the axis of justification for urban interventions
