Analítica

This research was oriented to recognize the social representation that nine fathers belonging of three families of Antioquia were living in over the time and how they have been changed by one generation to another. The general objective was researching inside of each family, the transformations that has taken place in the social representations of paternity which have been constructed by fathers of different generations inside of each family. As a methodological approach we worked the qualitative method, using the research biographical-narrative way. The present article is divided in a short introduction that contextualizes it, then you can find the conceptual referents, and finally we expose the methodological memory of the process and expose the findings from three moments: I. Characterization of the families interviewed, each one with a respective graphic representation; II. Intrafamiliar analysis of paternity since children arrive to the family, the learning by generations and the constructions that each man has done in the family to become a father; and III. Intergenerational analysis from the family conformation and the role as fathers
