Analítica

The aim of the present work is to locate Beatriz Lavandera as the initiator of the Discourse Analysis in Argentina in order to be able to account for how she arrives at this approach. To do this, we will first inscribe her within a linguistic tradition that goes from her academic training in structuralism to variationist sociolinguistics. Second, we will see how she finds in Discourse Analysis a necessary and complementary instance that allows her to analyze language in use from the discourses that are produced in a certain community. Third, we will give an account of the characteristics acquired by the Discourse Analysis that she proposes. Finally, we will conclude by showing the scope of her proposal
