Analítica

In this paper, we have started from the general consideration of the city as a laboratory for experimentation, a space for negotiation and constant transformation that allows us to reflect on possible processes of cultural innovation that are emerging today out of collective proposals to transform the territory, partly linked to a municipalism with aspirations of institutionalization. Our hypothesis is that, through the activation of areas of opportunity for social transformation (both conceptual and physical), the creation of trust and deliberation communities is produced through the sharing of analysis, decision making and action processes, activating learning processes of active citizenship
