To some, Joe Darby is a hero. Darby is the military prison guard who turned in photos of prisoner abuse at Abu Ghraib, launching an investigation that resulted in the imprisonment of six guards. Generals have lauded him, and Darby was given a 'Profile in Courage' award. But back at home in Cumberland, Maryland, Darby is called a traitor and a rat, and the military has determined that it's not safe for him to live in his own hometown. Anderson Cooper reports
