Analítica

The empowerment of women has grown over time since the first social movements for the fight for gender equality were carried out, gradually achieving that their rights and their participation in different labor spheres are recognized: In this sense, the health sector has not been the exception, which is why it is increasingly common to see women dabble in professional activities that have to do with science and health. The achievements of many women and the recognition of their valuable and active participation have become evident, as well as the respect for the role they play both in the family, academically, as well as in research and professionally. In this context I share the life and entrepreneurship story of a Mexican woman, restless, athletic, sensitive, committed and with a big heart who, after making a mistake in the route she had chosen, decided to change and follow a passion and heartbeat
