Analítica

The present work analyzes the colonial linguistic imagination problems and the relationship with the obstruction of the contingent nature of its own language. The colonial linguistic is the result of an existential impoverishment process complex and castration of the consciousness through the language. It can be read with the articulation of diversity of epistemological framework that must be carefully deciphered. The linguistic colonial is nothing else than negation of the word and therefore the negation itself of the other. Indeed, the languages and their discursive meta-regimes as we know are nothing more than, complex forms of overlapping of the imperial/ colonial power, that is to say simple inventions that were unable of documenting the immensity of attributes that define the own nature of the non-euro American language
