This book examines Aalto's role as a designer of commissions for the Finnish wood and paper industries. These projects were extensive and multi-faceted, involving not only factories but also office and residential buildings. His industrial architecture ranged from extensive neighborhood planning to villas for upper management and modest wooden houses for workers. The book is profusely illustrated with photos, plans, and drawings. Part of a planned 28-part series

Nota general: Índices This extensive publication documents Alvar Aalto's work on the design of the Helsinki University of Technology campus, which began when he won the first prize in an architectural competition in 1949, and continued with a number of other campus buildings through the 1950s and 1960s. The totality that Aalto created can still be experienced today, despite various infills in the area designed by other architects. Besides numerous photographs and schematics, this excellent survey includes articles by Aalto experts on the historical background of the university and its architecture, and on the mid-20th-century university campus. The Works section presents a selection of buildings and unrealized projects by the Aalto office between 1947 and 1974
