

Cultura e discurso atravessados no corpo-mulher da Amazônia brasileira [

Analítica

In the Amazon Forest area, the human body and its aspects have unique meanings. They are ambivalent between nature and culture. Use of the Discourse Analysis, by Michel Pêcheux, so as to think of the body, above all the women's body, as a discursive materiality. In the Amazonia, there are specific gender-based roles that affect and regulate the life of women. Biological events, such as menstruation, pregnancy, and postpartum, are socially stigmatized and treated with prejudice. This crossing of the patriarchy terms the signifier "panema" (bad luck) in reference to a woman. Such a label prohibits, distances, and disqualifies a woman and her body, treating them as objects of control and power
