Analítica

The objective of this article is to analyze aspects of the trajectory and action undertaken by the Sociedade dos Amigos de Alberto Torres, a nationalist entity founded in Rio de Janeiro, in 1932, reinterpreting ideas defended by its patron, the sociologist and politician Alberto Torres. In a special way, we will approach the campaigns imposed against the arrival of Assyrian immigrants and, later, of Japanese origin, to Brazil, in the 1930s. In the field of action, the Society of Friends of Alberto Torres used the strength of the press and insertion in the National Constituent Assembly of 1933-1934 to achieve the goals of its anti-immigrant agenda. From a methodological point of view, we adopted the analysis of documentary and press sources, especially those safeguarded in the National Library's Hemeroteca Digital. Among the works that helped in the preparation of this article, we highlight the research of Geraldo (2009), Nucci (2009), Castañeda (1998), Lesser (1994) and Stepan (1985). As a point of conclusion, it is noticeable that the Sociedade dos Amigos de Alberto Torres played an active role in the articulation of ideas and practical actions, including constitutional ones, for the delimitation of the immigrant policy adopted by Brazil in the 1930s
