In any Spanish dictionary, whatever its era, in which the word barbero (barber) appears, it is clearly and concisely defined as the age-old occupation of cutting and trimming barbas (beards), from which the word barbero etymologically derives. In this compilation, I begin with a short introduction on the origins of the trade and the subsequent legislation drafted to separate the various fields of competence embodied in the profession since time immemorial, these include haircutting, shaving, leeching and bleeding, molar and tooth extractions, minor surgery and other medical incursions. My study is generally focused on the search for names of historic Badajoz professionals, their working quarters and trade histories up until 1936 which became a "before and after" moment for many in the trade, particularly when I observed some of them appear listed as casualties of the cruel Spanish Civil War
