Analítica

Starting from the post-structuralist perspective of the use of legal discourse, the article brings the production of meaning orbiting over the category "high salary" in conjunction with the economic and parliamentary discourse. We proceed with the analysis of 14 bills that raised the nominal re-muneration (active income) of Brazilian judges and female judges. This is between 2004 and 2015. We do so with the aid of Ronny Scholz's lexicometry from 761 speeches collected in the database of the Chamber of Deputies and the Federal Senate in Brazil. Qualitatively, we select three excerpts to support representative analyses of the linguistic corpus. The main inference of our analysis is that although the legal discourse in capturing the analyzed speech acts is not configured as new and original, it informs the connection with general systems of language in extension by the institute of interdiscursivity of the legislative and economic domains
